Engagement ceremony

The engagement ceremony is an important pre-wedding ritual in Indian cultures where the would-be-bride and the bridegroom-to-be come face to face and are formally betrothed to each other by their families. The Hindu tradition of 'Vagdanam' dates back to Vedic ages, and it involves the groom's family giving their words to the bride's family that they will accept their daughter and will be responsible for her future wellbeing.

Maangal Pher

The Indian Wedding is an elaborate ceremony that consists of myriad rituals. The bride and the groom perform all these customs to get bound merrily in marriage. Among the various rituals, the Saat Pher finds a special mention. Like the Jaimala or Varmala ritual, the Saat Pher too has been glorified in movies

Haldi hath Ceremony

In our Indian culture, haldi or turmeric holds a special place of honour. It is known for its anti-inflammatory and other healing properties, because of which it has become popular as a medicine as well. And, one area where it holds the most important place is when it comes to Indian traditions. In Indian weddings, this amazing ingredient has an entire ceremony to its name. You guessed it right! We are referring to the vibrant haldi ceremony.

Gala Dinner

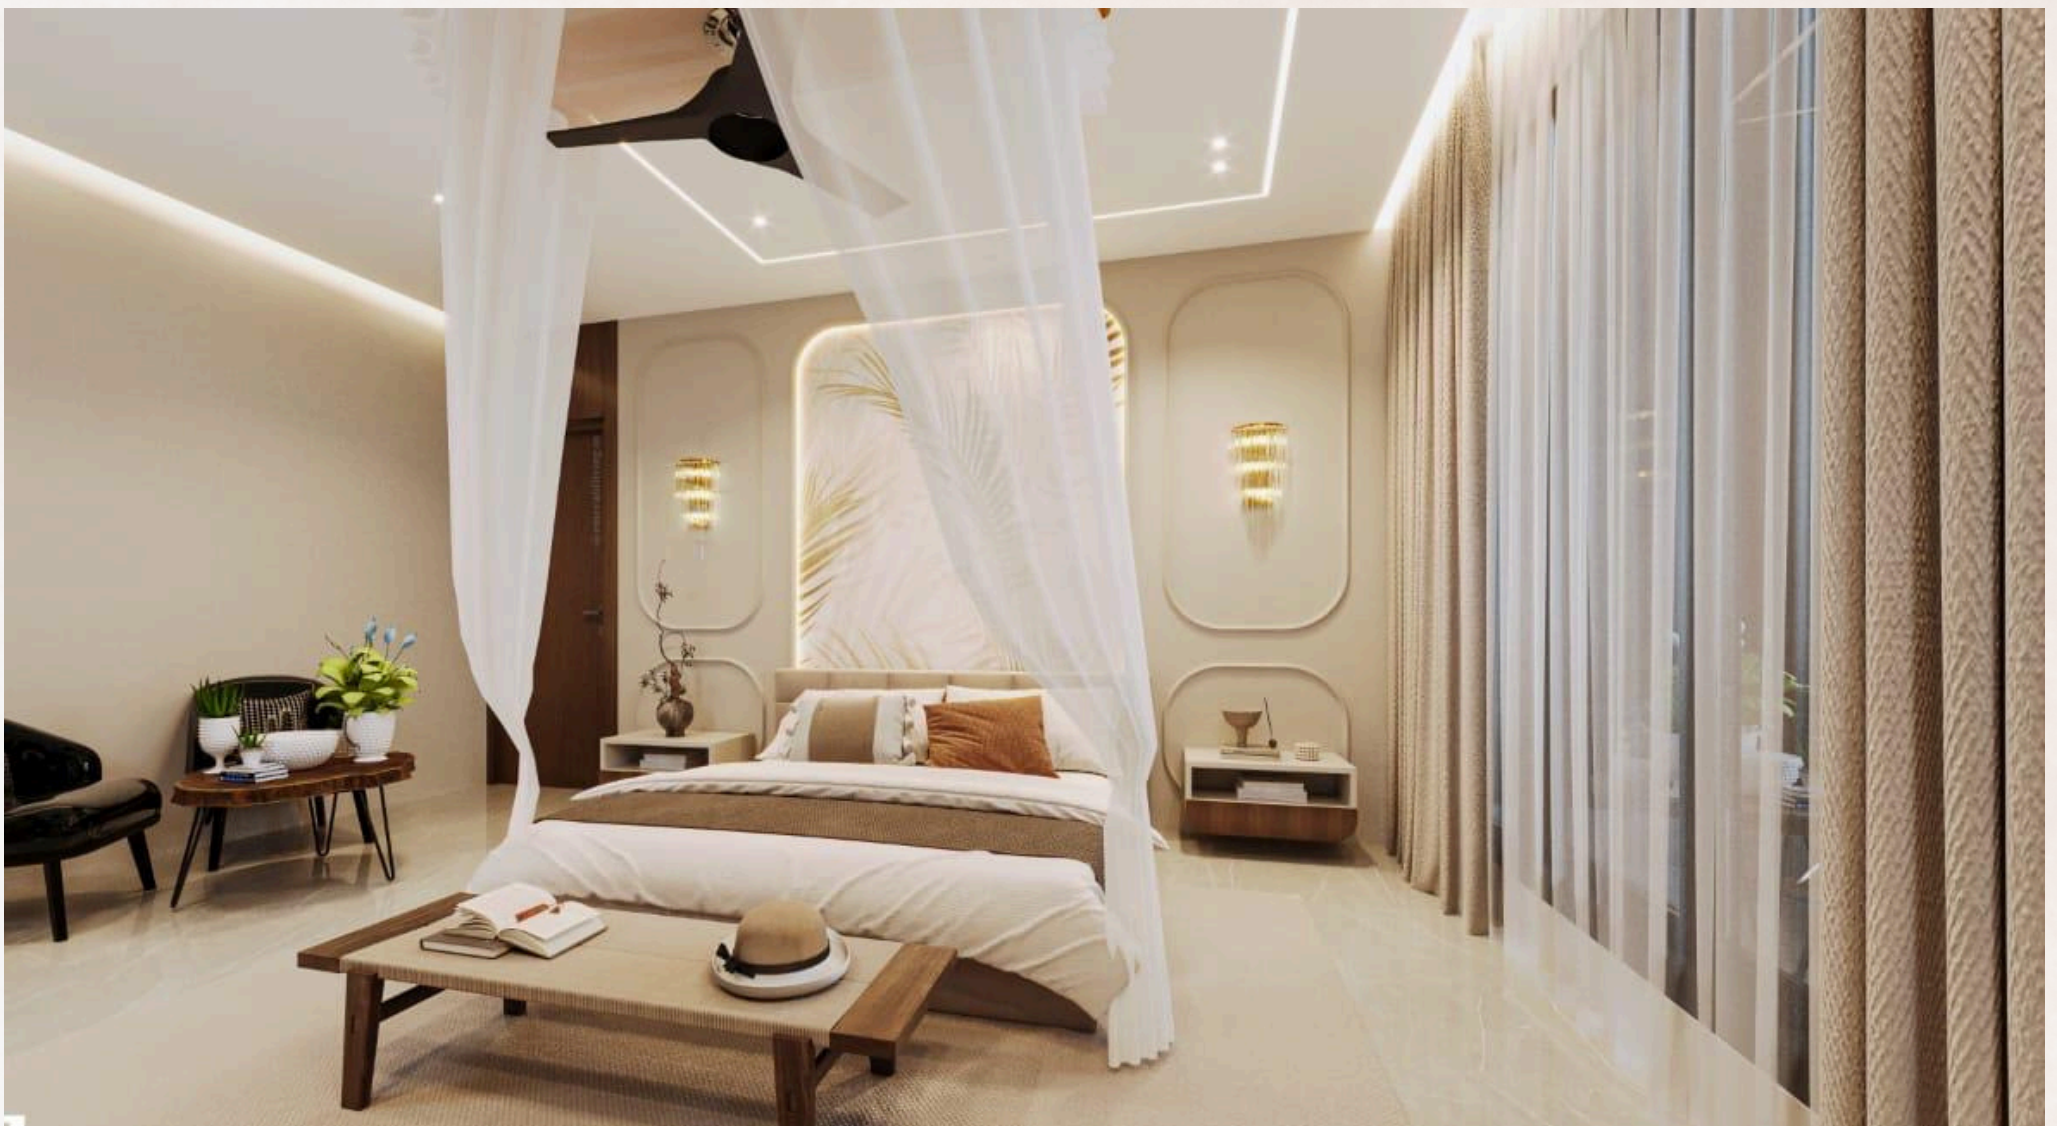

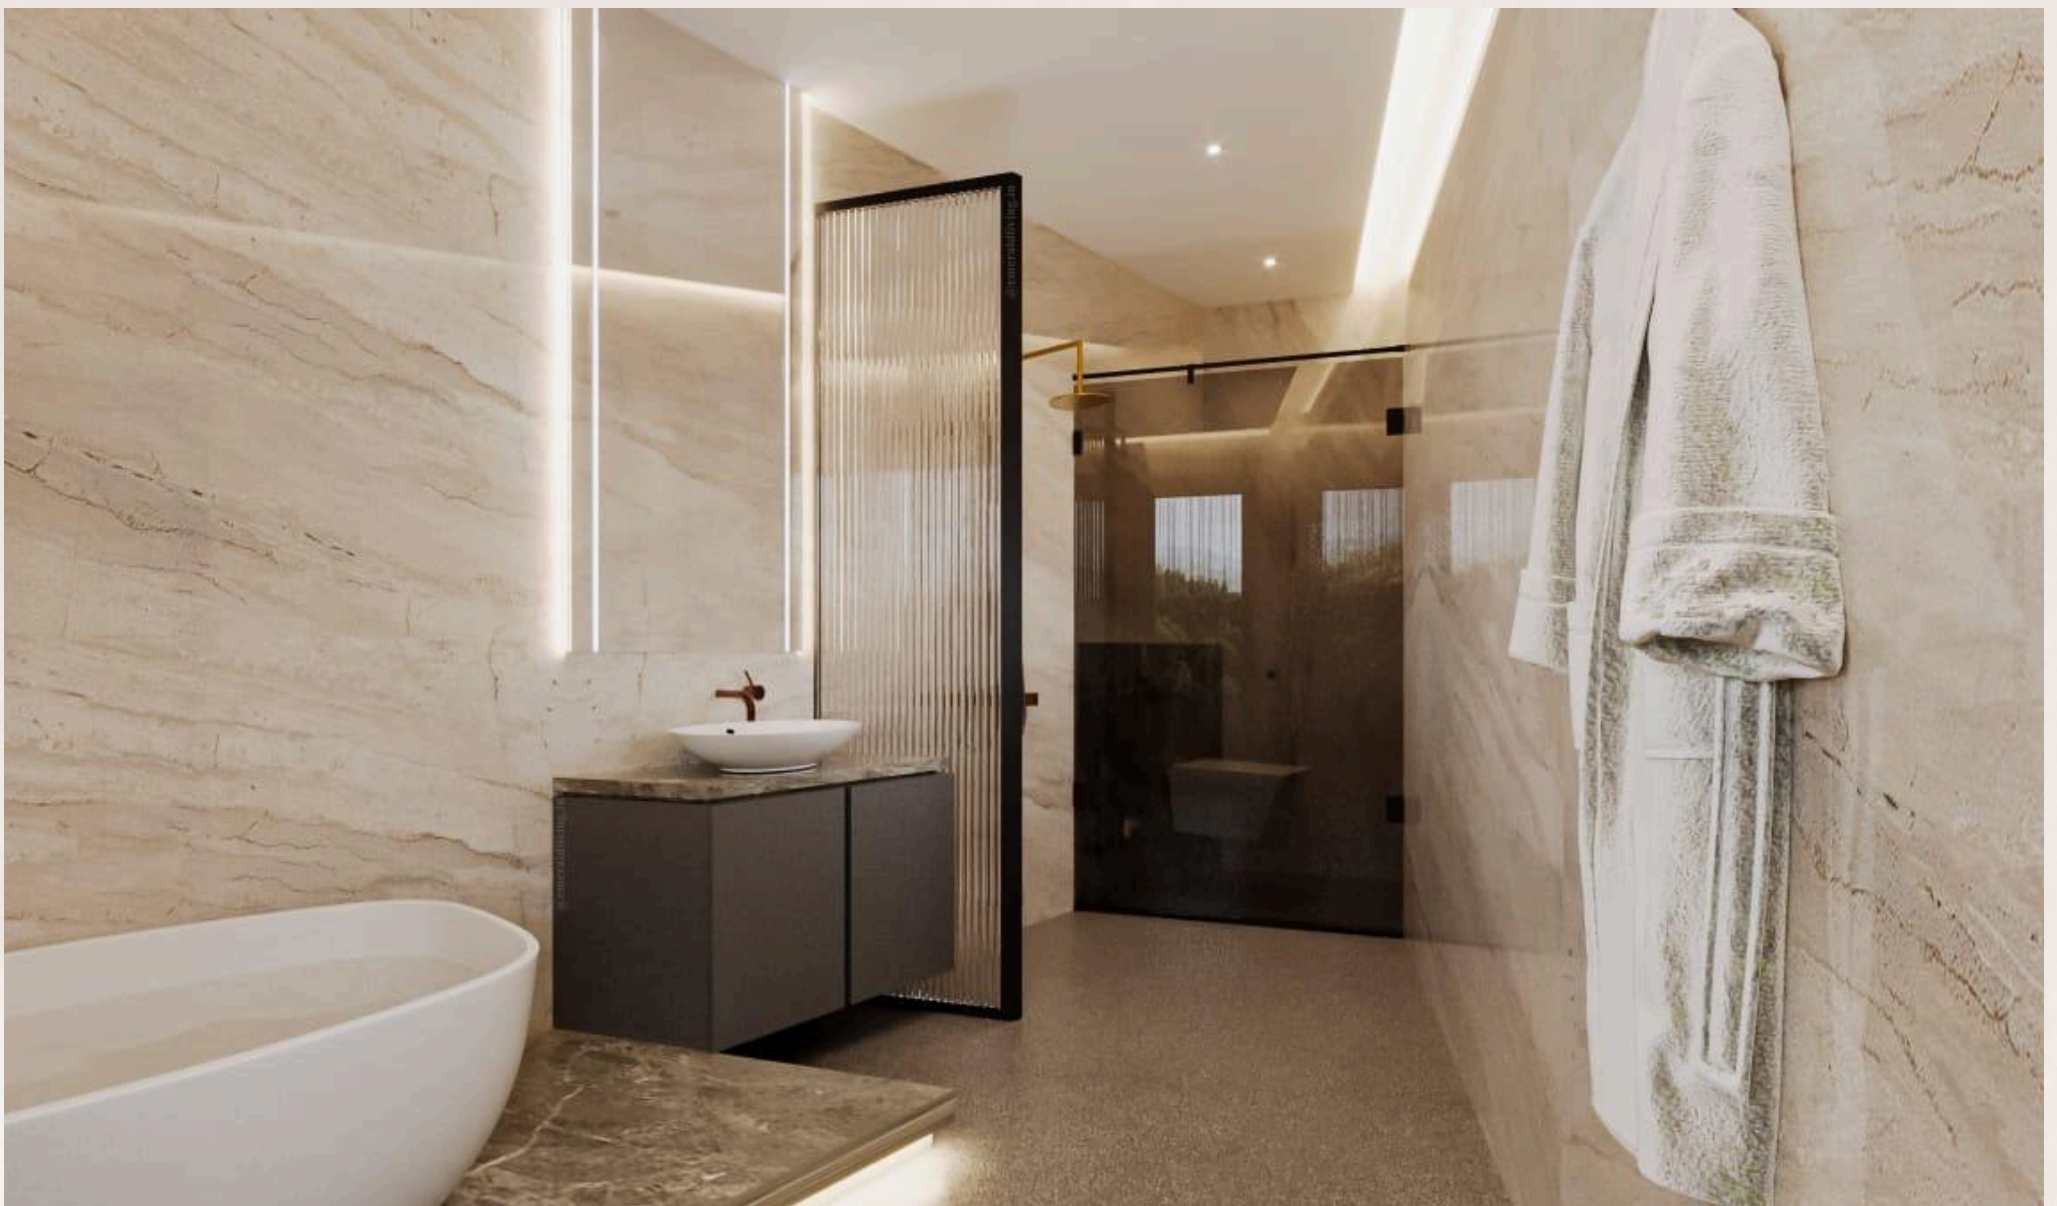

When planning a gala dinner, your goal should be to make everything look effortless. You're trying to inspire confidence in your guests in the hopes of making your organisation shine. What better way to do that than to plan a grand engagement that appears to run itself?

Decoration

You can never go wrong with the red and gold look. It is classic, it is timeless and it is the best of the lot. This kind of wedding stage decoration is perfect for couples, who have a classic Indian-themed wedding. The gold and red colors look festive and traditional enough for a beautiful wedding function.
